By Ben S. Gutierrez and Kenneth A. Aguilar

It is 11:00 a.m. on a Tuesday in Quiapo, Manila. A group of people are gathered in front of the Quiapo Church, waiting for the start of the daily Mass. The atmosphere is peaceful, and the people are dressed in their Sunday best. The church is a large, ornate building with a tall steeple. The people are of various ages and backgrounds, but they all seem to be united in their faith.

Devastation traced to but mitigated

The devastation caused by the tsunami in Southeast Asia has been traced to a single cause: the undersea earthquake. The earthquake was a powerful one, with a magnitude of 9.1. It caused a massive displacement of water, which then hit the coast of Southeast Asia. The result was a massive tsunami that killed thousands of people and destroyed many buildings. However, the damage was not as bad as it could have been. This was because of the quick response of the international community. They sent money and supplies to help the victims. They also sent people to help with the reconstruction. Because of this, the damage was not as bad as it could have been.

Tsunami donors give, but they also take back

The tsunami has caused a lot of damage in Southeast Asia. Many people have lost their homes and their lives. The international community has responded by sending money and supplies to help the victims. However, some of the money has been taken back. This is because some of the money has been used for other purposes. For example, some of the money has been used to pay for the salaries of government officials. This is a problem because the money is needed for the reconstruction of the damaged areas. The international community should make sure that the money is used for the right purposes. They should also make sure that the money is distributed fairly.

Ancient justice system effective in 2 towns

By Paul S. Gorman

The ancient justice system in two towns in the Philippines has been found to be effective. The towns are known as Baguio and Benguet. They are both in the Cordillera region of the Philippines. The justice system in these towns is based on the traditional customs of the people. It is a system of mediation and arbitration. The people of the towns go to a local leader to resolve their disputes. The leader listens to both sides of the story and then makes a decision. The decision is usually based on the customs of the people. The system is very effective because the people respect the decisions of the leader. They also respect the customs of their community. This is why the system has been able to survive for so long.

Book helps heal spirit of survivors

By Paul S. Gorman

A new book has been published that helps survivors of the tsunami heal their spirit. The book is titled "The Spirit of the Survivors". It is written by a group of people who were survivors of the tsunami. The book tells the stories of the survivors and how they have healed their spirit. The book is a very powerful one. It shows the strength of the human spirit and the power of faith. It is a book that everyone should read.

Quezon folk free rare marine turtle

By Paul S. Gorman

A group of people in Quezon, Philippines, have freed a rare marine turtle. The turtle was found on a beach. It was a very large turtle, and it was very rare. The people of Quezon have a long history of protecting the environment. They have been successful in protecting many different species of animals. This is another example of their success. They have freed the turtle and let it go. The turtle is now free to live in the ocean. The people of Quezon are very proud of what they have done. They are happy to see the turtle go back to the ocean.

Owva sets deadline for tsunami inquiries

By Rhonda S. Flores

THE OVERSEAS Workers Welfare Administration (Owva) said relatives of the Asian tsunami victims with Filipino-sounding names have three weeks to inquire about their kin before the Owva shelves the records.

Owva operations center head duty officer Mustafa Glang said three weeks is a reasonable time to expect people with missing relatives in Thailand and Indonesia, which were hardest hit by the tsunami, to look for these missing persons.

"If three weeks from now, there is still nobody who claims them, then these missing people may not be ours," Glang told the inquirer in a recent interview.

Based on the latest list of the Department of Foreign Affairs, 12 Filipinos remain missing in Thailand while 16 fatalities with Filipino-sounding names have not been confirmed to be Filipinos.

Those still missing were identified as Marcelo J. Albes, Jeanin C. Barandot, Gloria Pongon Bourrie, Crisett Buleon Cruz, Remedios Rico Daniel, Michael Galang, Rosalene Circo, Alexander Latosa, Ariel Mallari, Renato Naval, Gerard S. Reyes and Edna Atienza Suma.

Glang said only one family, that of 23-year-old Norma Cathryn Llorente, had come forward to check if the "Katrin Llorente" in the list of fatalities with Filipino-sounding names was their relative.

No one else has checked with the Owva concerning other fatalities with Filipino-sounding names.

Glang, a veteran welfare officer, said families with missing relatives usually did not wait too long to check with authorities on the status of their loved ones.

"We will keep the records until there are no more inquiries. We're still waiting for information and updates from Thailand. Otherwise, we will have to shelve the records," Glang said.

The Owva operations center, which daily updates its list based on information from the DFA, has received fewer and fewer queries on tsunami victims.

The center used to receive 300 personal and phone queries on overseas Filipino workers in the tsunami-hit areas.

Five Filipinos were confirmed dead in Thailand while 27 survivors have been repatriated. Another 29 chose to remain in Thailand to work, the DFA said.

Solon for tagging 'risk areas'

By Cynthia D. Salena and Carlie Pable

AN ADMINISTRATION lawmaker yesterday pushed for the nationwide identification of "risk areas" vulnerable to natural calamities in order to better protect the people from disaster.

Rep. Prospero Pichay Jr. (Lakas, Surigao del Sur), co-chair of the Commission on Appointments, said the government authorities concerned would then be able to put in place proactive measures to lessen the loss to lives and property during calamities.

"While the government cannot outlaw strong rains which trigger floods and landslides, what it can do is identify areas at risk," Pichay said.

The identification of these areas and the adoption of a national emergency and disaster readiness plan is embodied in House Bill No. 3472 which Pichay has filed.

The bill calls for the creation of a Philippine Emergency and Disaster Management Authority to replace the National Disaster Coordinating Council.

In the bill, Pichay noted that about 60 percent of the world's major natural disasters occur in the Asia-Pacific region, making the Philippines perennially vulnerable to calamities.

Pichay said the Brussels-based Center for Research on the Epidemiology of Disasters cited the Philippines as having the highest natural disaster occurrences in the world in a span of 90 years from 1900 to 1990.

"There is a need to de-fragment the emergency and disaster management structure in the country and consolidate it into a new and independent authority," Pichay said in his bill.

Pichay pointed that emergency and disaster management measures currently in place were "short-term and reactive in nature."

"What we truly need is a measure with substantial and long-lasting results. One salient way to bring this about is through a comprehensive and centralized emergency authority," he said.

Pichay said the PEDMA shall be under the Office of the President and composed of considered experts in the field of emergency and disaster management.

Japanese envoy apologizes again to Filipinos for WWII

By Patricia Torres-Panama
and G. C. Caramba, Jr.

THE JAPANESE ambassador to the Philippines has again apologized to Filipinos for the country's role in World War II.

The ambassador, who is visiting the Philippines for the first time since the war, said that he was deeply sorry for the suffering that Filipinos endured during the war.

He said that he was also proud of the role that Filipinos played in the war, and that he hoped that the two countries would continue to work together for peace and prosperity.

The ambassador's apology was met with mixed reactions from Filipinos. Some people were moved by his words, while others were angry that he was not doing more to help the Philippines.

Some people also pointed out that the Japanese government had not done enough to help the Philippines during the war, and that the ambassador's apology was just a formality.

Despite the mixed reactions, the ambassador's apology was a significant step towards reconciliation between the two countries.

The ambassador's visit is part of a larger effort by the Japanese government to improve relations with the Philippines.

The Japanese government has also been providing financial aid to the Philippines, and has been working to improve trade relations between the two countries.

The Japanese government has also been working to improve cultural relations between the two countries, and has been sponsoring various cultural exchange programs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP) — A U.S. air strike on a Baghdad suburb Monday killed five people, including a woman and her children, and wounded others, officials said.

The strike, which was part of a larger U.S. military operation, hit a house in the northern suburb of Samarra. The house was believed to be a weapons cache, but it was instead a civilian residence.

The U.S. military said the strike was a "mistake" and that the house was not a target. The military said it was "sorry" for the deaths and injuries.

CAP eyes buyout of planholders

By Marissa Reyes

MANILA — The Philippine Social Security Administration (SSS) is eyeing a buyout of its planholders, an executive source said. The source said the buyout is part of the SSS's effort to improve its financial health.

The SSS is a government-owned corporation that provides social security benefits to its members. It has a long history of financial difficulties, and its planholders have been demanding a buyout for years.

The SSS's planholders are currently paying a premium of 10 percent of their salary to the SSS. The SSS is offering to buy out the planholders at a price of 10 times their current premium. The SSS is offering to buy out the planholders at a price of 10 times their current premium.

SMC sees bright prospects in bid for Australian firm

By Michael S. Tomlinson

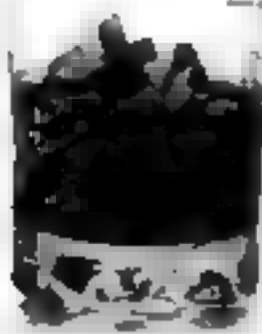

San Francisco, Sept. 3 — San Francisco-based SMC Corp. has announced a bid to acquire the Australian firm, SMC Australia Pty. Ltd., a move that could significantly expand its operations in the Pacific region.

The bid, valued at approximately $100 million, represents a major strategic move for SMC, which has been aggressively expanding its global footprint. The acquisition would give SMC a strong foothold in the Australian market, a key area for its long-term growth strategy.

SMC Australia, known for its expertise in various industries, would bring valuable resources and market knowledge to the combined entity. The deal is expected to close within the next few months, pending regulatory approvals.

Agri credit gap seen to hit $400B in '15

By Rosemarie A. Delacruz

The Philippine Department of Agriculture (DA) estimates that the credit gap in the agricultural sector will reach $400 billion by 2015, according to a report released by the DA.

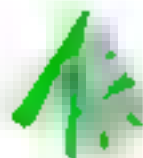

The report, titled "Agricultural Credit Gap: A Challenge for the Future," states that the credit gap in the agricultural sector is a major constraint to the growth of the sector.

The report also states that the credit gap in the agricultural sector is a major constraint to the growth of the sector.

the 1990s, the U.S. economy has been in a state of "long-term stagnation," according to the Wall Street Journal. "The economy is not growing as fast as it should," says the Journal. "The economy is not growing as fast as it should."

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In the United Kingdom, all of the major health bodies, including the national government, health care bodies, the press, consumer and public interest groups, and the public, are now concerned with obesity, with the government's leading role in addressing the problem being particularly prominent.

The data also indicated changes in attitudes towards obesity, with a growing awareness of the health consequences of obesity, and a growing acceptance of the need for government action to address the problem.

These findings have implications for policy and practice. They suggest that obesity is now a major public health problem, and that government action is needed to address the problem. They also suggest that there is a growing awareness of the health consequences of obesity, and a growing acceptance of the need for government action to address the problem.

the 1990s, the U.S. economy has been in a period of relative stagnation. The unemployment rate has risen from 5.6 percent in 1989 to 7.6 percent in 1995. The economy has been plagued by a series of recessions, the most recent of which began in 1990 and ended in 1992. The economy has been hit hard by a combination of factors, including a sharp decline in government spending, a rise in interest rates, and a decline in private investment. There is a growing trend in the Philippines to watch movies that are not only entertaining but also educational. This trend is reflected in the popularity of movies that focus on social issues, history, and culture. These movies are often praised for their quality and depth, and they provide a valuable resource for learning and reflection.
